ANDY • RANDAZZO • TEACHES

My name is Andy Randazzo. I am a father, artist, educator and a passionate business professional. I believe that in order to be a great teacher, experience in the field of what you are teaching is key. Exceptional teachers not only possess passion, but a unique ability to instill that passion to those they are educating. I have 25+ years of field experience, enthusiasm, drive, and a strong family history in the field of communication arts, business, marketing and more, all of which I'm eager to pass along to my prospective students.

As a graduating bachelor of fine arts in advertising and marketing from The School of Visual Arts (SVA) in Manhattan and Queens College, New York, Art Education I have a very strong interest in pursuing a teaching career. With experience working with students professionally, on the college and public school levels, I have a diverse and extensive background with much to offer.

In the last few years I have been a student teaching at Rockville Center South Side Middle School, Hewlett-Woodmere Elementary, Middle and High Schools. I built relationships with 100's students where I planned and executed on unit & lesson plans and created everything from clay pots and dishes to colleges and acrylic paintings and some 3D projects.

I have also taught at colleges such as NYIT, LIU Post and Hofstra University. I engaged these students to break down the complicated understanding of marketing into simple steps that students could grasp.

In conclusion, I am actively seeking a teaching position and would love the opportunity to work with your school.

I encourage you to visit www.AndyTeaches.com where you will find more information about me, my background, my work, my eagerness to teach and how I can be an integral addition to your school. Thank you for your consideration and I look forward to hearing from you.

Sincerely,
Andy Randazzo
